At the Theaters.

The Park has had no better attraction this season than Bartley Campbell's play "My Partner," which is running there this week, and, in consequence, the audiences are large and enthusiastic.

At the Grand "Lights and Shadows," which is beautifully staged, will be seen for the last time this afternoon and to-night.

The first opera company to play in Indianapolis this season, and one that is very strong artistically and numerically, is the Corned company, which opens at the Grand, to-morrow night, in Millocker's brilliant work, "Vice-admiral," which has never been done here. It will be followed, Friday night, and Saturday morning, by Cebulko's tawful work "Amorita," which is also new here, and "Black Hussar," Saturday night. The company includes such noted artists as Lillian Conway, Laura Blanche, Marie Langdon, Jennie Keith, Harry Hill, the tenor with Duff last season, W. H. Fitzgerald and others. The sale of seats will begin this morning, and there will be no advance in the regular prices of admission.

She Goes Home Cured.

Miss Balion left the National Surgical Institute, this city, yesterday, for her home in Kansas. Miss B., who had been unsuccessfully treated in a number of the large cities of the country, was brought to the institute upon a cot. She now walks as well as anyone and has been cured. The success of the Surgical Institute in the treatment of spinal curvatures, hip-joint disease, crooked feet and paralysis has given it a reputation that brings to it patients, not only from every State in the Union, but from Canada and Europe.

SURGEONS OF THE BEE-LINE

They Meet to Exchange Ideas Relative to Their Special Railroad Practice.

A Few Suggestions as to Hospitals for Railway Employees—Annual Meetings of Royal and Select Masters and Good Templars.

The association of the Bee-line surgeons held their fourth annual meeting at Room 73 of the Bates House, yesterday. Those present were J. M. Weaver, of Dayton, O., president of the association; J. L. Williams, of Cardington, that State; secretary; A. Dunlap, of Dayton; W. R. Keve, of Sidney, O.; H. H. Yergin, of Union City; J. W. Marsee, of Indianapolis; W. O. Jenkins, of Terre Haute, and Henry S. Bell, of Paris, Ill. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: Henry S. Bell, M. D., of Sidney, O., vice-president, and J. L. Williams, M. D., of Cardington, secretary. The object of the association is to discuss the work of the preceding year, to exchange views and experiences, and to devise plans to better accomplish the work that falls to the lot of a railway surgeon. The afternoon session was spent in reading the experience of the year and discussing cases. The various members have been called upon to treat. There were no set speeches, but a general talk, in which all joined, and a number of new modes of treatment were discussed.

At the evening session, President Weaver made the annual address. He said that three years ago, at their first meeting, the members came together as strangers, and only knew of each other as their names appeared in the company's reports, but now they met and grasped each other by the hand as friends and associates, working together in the great cause of science and humanity. The meetings have always been both pleasant and profitable, but have not been as successful as they should have been in point of attendance. At all these meetings practical and important topics have been discussed, and those attending have all gone away feeling that they have been benefited, and the cause in which they have a common interest advanced. "One of the best things about our meetings," he continued, "is that each and every member has been willing to say something about the subject presented, and in his own way, regardless of text-books or writers. In these meetings it is practical thought and experience, rather than theories, that are needed. We have not stopped to talk of ethics or fees, or consult how much money we can get out of our company for individual cases, but rather how we can best aid in hastening recovery from injury and restore to place and position the injured. We have talked about shocks, fractures and dislocations, contused and lacerated wounds, amputations, amputations, gangrenas, and cold applications, injuries to the eye, antiseptics, etc."

The speaker said that since the last annual meeting a national association of railway surgeons had been formed, and that he was present at its organization, and that standing from the high character and standing of many of the members, it would rank among the foremost medical associations of the country, and he advised members of this one to join it. Several of the railway systems of the country, he continued, have adopted the plan of appointing a "surgeon-in-chief," whose duty it seems to be to somewhat supervise the corps of surgeons, systematize the work and act as an adviser to the general manager of the officials in all things concerning surgical affairs. The Bee-line has no such surgeon-in-chief, and the speaker suggested the propriety of calling the attention of the general manager to the subject.

"There is another matter of very considerable importance and interest," said the Doctor, "that I desire to call your attention to, and that is the care and treatment of injured employees in hospitals, rather than in hotels, boarding-houses or under certain circumstances, in their own homes. Those of us who have had experience in hospital work and management know that the results in the treatment of seriously injured persons in hospitals are far better and more satisfactory than in private houses. Many of the employees of our railroads are unmarried men, and without homes. Their time, when off duty, is spent in hotels, boarding and lodging-houses, and to these places they are taken when injured. Many of these places are of the poorer class, inconvenient, crowded and poorly ventilated, and the same can be said of the treatment of the injured. If these places of injury, the chances for recovery are very limited. We are all thoroughly familiar with this condition of affairs. Many are the cases that if hygienic surroundings and food are had our efforts are often in vain, and the results disastrous. I have no doubt all of us have lost cases thus situated, and have felt that if they could have been sent to some well-regulated hospital their recovery would have been greatly hastened and lives saved. At some places along the line of our road—Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton, Indianapolis, Terre Haute and St. Louis—are good and well-established hospitals, where, I have no doubt, a larger proportion of injured employees could be sent and cared for by the local surgeons. The road at these points. In my judgment, I think it would be well for this association to recommend to the general manager that steps be taken that will lead to the sending of these hospitals all seriously injured who have no satisfactory homes and can bear transportation."

After Dr. Weaver's address the association adjourned, and most of the members spent the evening at the theaters.

The Good Templars.

The Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars met in the Masonic Block, yesterday afternoon. The number of delegates and visitors present was unusually large. The grand officers present were: Eli Miller, Master; W. A. Keve, grand worthy counselor; Hannah Stanley, Carlos City, vice-master; Miss Nannie A. Wheeler, Carlisle, grand secretary; John A. Moorman, Fairland, worthy treasurer, and Mrs. A. A. Brookbanks, Jeffersonville, grand superintendent. The reports of the officers showed that the progress of the order was greater than for several years. The number of members in the State is over five thousand, the increase the last year being unprecedented. Among the delegates here are several preachers. The annual session will close to-day by the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Royal and Select Masters.

The Indiana Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters met in annual session at the Masonic Temple yesterday. The address upon the condition of the order was delivered by illustrious Grand Master Henry W. Woodworth, of Fort Wayne. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: I. G. M., Oliver B. Sargent, Logansport; G. I. M., Charles W. Sick, Mishawaka; Edward H. Donnan, G. T. C., George W. Martin, H. Rice, Indianapolis; G. R. John M. Bramwell, Indianapolis; Grand principal conductor of the work, Theodore D. Brown, Crawfordville. The new officers will be installed this morning, and the council will adjourn to-morrow. This afternoon and to-morrow the Grand Chapter will be in session.

Fire in a Picture Store.

A fire broke out in the frame manufacturing department of H. Lieber's store, on South Meridian street, last night, and although the damage to the building is slight, $2,500 will hardly cover the loss by the smoke and heat to the costly frames, stored on the fourth floor. The night-watchman first discovered the flames on the third floor, and by the time the firemen arrived the fire had reached the stairway leading to the floor above. It was confined principally to picture-frames and varnish, and was extinguished with little trouble by the use of the chemical engine. Mr. Lieber is of the opinion that spontaneous combustion in the keel of varnish started the fire. The insurance on the stock is $4,500, placed with the following companies: Queen's, London, $1,000; Guardian, London, $1,000; Royal, London, $1,500; Fireman's Association, London, $1,000.

Frank Garbolini Aids.

Rena Ward, who occupied a room at No. 189 West Court street, committed suicide, yesterday afternoon, by taking carbolic acid. Monday she left her room and went to the home of a friend at No. 171 West Washington street, to spend a few days. Yesterday she was missed from the house, and a few minutes afterward was found dead in an adjoining room. The woman, so far as known, has no relatives in Indianapolis. Her former home was in Tuscola, Ill., where a sister resides.

A PRIZE-FIGHT DISTURBED.

The Police Make a Raid on Emmerich's Hall and Arrest Two Amateur Pugilists.

Since the first of the month the local sports have had a prize fight arranged between George Poppiano, an Italian, and Samuel Farmer, both of this city. The details were successfully kept a secret, and the police had nothing to guide them until yesterday afternoon, when a person from Haughville came to the station-house with the information that the fight would occur about 10 o'clock that evening, in Emmerich's hall, a new building in that village. Accordingly, Sergeants Quigley and Laporte and patrolmen Sorters and Whitley engaged a carriage and set out to arrest the fighters. They arrived about an hour before the appointed time. Officer Sorters, dressed in citizen's clothes, left the carriage and went to the building, found it lighted, and hearing the fighters, he went in and arrested them. Officer Sorters, dressed in citizen's clothes, returned to the officers in waiting and notified them that he had the men located. Arriving at the building, the officers found that every door was locked, and that the keys had been taken up stairs by the managers. They learned, though, that it was the intention of the fighters and spectators to descend by a ladder, should a signal be given that the police were on hand.

In a few moments some one above discovered that the officers were near the building and the ladder was lowered. No sooner did it touch the ground than the officers, one after the other, began the ascent. They reached the top too late to catch the men while engaged in the fight. By the time they got into the room the ring had been deserted and the men were tumbling down stairs over each other to get away. One man went through into the cellars, and the officers followed about the place in pursuit and got into the cellar in time to arrest Farmer, who was crawling through a hole leading to the street. Poppiano escaped, but was afterwards arrested in the air. Both men had the charge of prize-fighting placed against their names at the police station.

The story of the fight as given by Farmer is that time was called at 10 o'clock. He could not, he said, give the names of the seconds or the referee. The fight lasted about ten minutes, and in that time three rounds were fought. At the signal that the police were coming a decision was asked for, and rendered in favor of Farmer, who, it is said, punished his opponent severely about the head and chest. The stakes were $25 a side and gate receipts. The officers say that there were probably 300 in the hall. Among the well-known fighters were about a half-dozen. In weight both men were about the same. Poppiano fighting at 159 and Farmer at 143. Farmer does not claim to have any reputation in the ring. Poppiano, it is understood, boasts of victory in nearly all the contests he has had. He is badly punished and acknowledges that he got the worst of the fight.

ACCIDENTS FROM NATURAL GAS.

An Explosion by Which an Engineer Is Seriously Injured.

William Reed, the engineer at the Castle engine-works, turned on the natural gas under his boiler, yesterday morning, and neglected to light it soon enough, and the result was an explosion which shook the whole building. He was blown several feet, and his face and hands were badly burned. A physician was called and rendered all the aid possible, but Reed suffered great pain. He is a young man, and lives at No. 329 South Illinois street. Gas men instruct consumers that in order to light the gas a burning piece of paper or a blaze of some kind should always be put into the stove or furnace before the gas is turned on. A strict compliance with this rule will do away with many accidents like the above.

An Overheated Room.

The eight-months-old child of C. H. Young, Deputy Secretary of State, was overcome yesterday by the overheating by natural gas of a room at Mr. Young's home on Ash street. The babe was with great difficulty revived.

switching service done in that section of the city, there being thirty or more switches leading to lumber-yards and manufactories of various kinds. It is claimed that a track on the canal bank would not only relieve the main line, but at the same time better accommodate the manufacturers by reaching several who have now no direct facilities of this kind. These are the reasons looked at from the side of the Erie Four, but it is said by the Monon people that the lease is made for the purpose of cutting them out of their own line of connection with the city. While the lease is not perfecting, it is said that the papers to that end are being prepared, and will be signed in a few days.

PROPOSED NATIONAL MEMORIAL.

To Be Erected in Washington by Both Union and Confederate Ex-Soldiers.

Washington Special. The project devised by Maj. William Howard Mills, of this city, formerly of the Fourteenth United States Infantry, for the formation of a fraternity of all the surviving soldiers of the late war, both Union and confederate, and the erection of a national military memorial building in this city, is not only attracting the attention of the ex-soldiers but of both houses of Congress. It is proposed that the survivors agree to constitute themselves a body corporate by the name and title of "The Military Order of United Sons of America," with the usual corporate powers.

The avowed object of the order will be to perfect the "fraternization of Appomattox," perpetuate the memories of the dead, strengthen the renewed bonds of union between the States, educate their children so as to forever insure the Nation from the perils of another civil war, and, for purposes fraternal, charitable, loyal and historical, but in no sense political, the erection of a building at the national capital, that shall be a suitable monument to the valor, patriotism and fidelity of the American soldier and sailor from the days of George Washington, and the establishment of a war museum and a soldiers' library.

The order is to consist, first, of the men who were regularly enlisted or mustered in either of the contending armies during the war; second, of the sons who have reached a required age; third, of such patriotic citizens as desire to contribute to the success of the order. One-half of all admissions free and dues from members are to go to a building fund to be used first for the erection of the memorial until completed, then for the erection of the war museum and library. Congress is to be asked for a perpetual charter and permission to erect the building upon one of the public reservations in Washington. The following representatives in Congress have written letters favorably favoring the project: Deacon S. Y. White, of New York; Representatives Thomas, of Wisconsin; Hopkins, of Illinois; Holman, of Indiana; Allen, of Michigan; Towehash, of Illinois (chairman of the House military committee); Morrill, of Kansas; Henderson, of Illinois; Canth, of Kentucky; Hooker, of Mississippi; Morrow, of California; Tim Campbell, of New York, and Hon. C. Wright, the well-known commander of the Sixth Corps, Army of the Potomac, and Gen. Joseph J. Reynolds, a well-known corps commander in the Western armies.

No Burial Place for Chinamen.

Baltimore Special.

How to bury the Chinaman who died lately, decently, is a problem calculated to puzzle the wits of the wisest undertaker in Baltimore. To inter the remains of a dead Celestial in other ground than that used for burial purposes is shocking to the deep sense of respect which all Chinamen entertain for the dead, and to secure permission from the managers of a cemetery for the celebration of the Chinese funeral rites in unoccupied ground is almost an impossibility. The objections urged are that the noise and excitement are revolting to the tastes of the other lot-owners and that damage is done by the crowd which assembles to the adjoining ground. The Chinamen insist that their tom-toms must sound and there is no law to prevent it; yet public sentiment is against it. The friends of the dead man are deeply exercised over their inability to secure a place of interment. The undertakers have exhausted every means to obtain a green spot of earth for the remains to rest in without avail, and have about despaired of being able to do so. Although the man's friends seem agitated about his funeral, it is a singular fact that none of them have called to pay their respects to the dead. The body lies in an ice casket in a good state of preservation.

Misinterprets His Motive.

Buffalo Express.

The Democrats have found out that Levi P. Norton is trying to carry North Carolina in order to secure the payment of repudiated State bonds which he holds. Now! The man is meaner than that. He wants to strip the lid from the lid of the election. Vice-president. Look out for him!

Handsome, Dashing Fellows. All Hustlers.

The commercial travelers' demonstration next Saturday will be by all odds the finest display of this campaign. Just think of it, several thousand handsome, dashing fellows in line, cheering and hustling for Harrison, all wearing fashionable silk hats furnished by Kelleher, the leading hatter, 23 West Washington street. The men should send their sizes to Mr. Kelleher as soon as possible so that all will be supplied with hats.
